About ACP

Thank you for your interest in joining the Association of Canadian Publishers (ACP). The ACP represents approximately 115 independent Canadian book publishers from across the country. Our diverse membership includes publishers from a variety of genres.

Mission

Through collective work, we advocate and collaborate to create the conditions for Canadian-owned book publishers' economic and cultural success. We work to help our members build the audience share for Canadian-authored and Canadian-published books in Canadian bookstores, libraries, educational institutions, and homes, and around the world.

Vision

A vibrant and diverse Canadian-owned book publishing industry producing works by Canadian creators that are valued by all Canadians.

Values

Respect: We uphold respect for each other as foundational to our work and workplaces. This includes, but is not exclusive to, work free from harassment, bullying, discrimination, and personal and sexual harassment.

Diversity & Inclusion: We uphold the importance of diversity, inclusion, accessibility, and gender parity in the Canadian book publishing industry. This includes, but is not exclusive to, culture, race, ethnicity, gender identification, sexual orientation, physical ability, and age.

Responsiveness, Communication & Collaboration: Open, transparent, respectful, and timely communication and collaboration are intrinsic to our success. They empower us to respond in meaningful ways to challenges and opportunities.

Shared Success & Recognition: We are stronger working together. Collectively, we express and add value to Canadian culture through the books we publish and promote across the supply chain. We believe publishers are the hub of book culture. The success of our members and their authors, individually and collectively, should be recognized, rewarded, and celebrated.

Copyright: We uphold the power and value of the written word. This includes respect for and the defense of copyright, which protects creators' and publishers' right to fair remuneration so that a diversity of voices and ideas can be amplified and heard.

Literacy: We uphold literacy as a basic human right. It is the key to a participatory society and cultivates a love of reading that benefits this and all future generations.

Financial Responsibility: We uphold responsible financial management and act with transparency to make wise, effective, and efficient use of the funds entrusted to us.
